THE FIGHTING PRINCE.

All the world loves a lover and the reverse is true that all the world loves a fighter. Under the caption, "The Fighting Prince," the Austin American pays the following glowing tribute to the fighting qualities of the German crown prince:

"One cannot read the descriptions of that prolonged and sanguinary conflict before Verdun, particularly that part of it relating to the all night struggle for the possession of Malancourt, and not admire the fighting qualities of the intrepid young commander of the Teuton forces, the crown prince of Germany."

"In following the vivid details of the accomplishments of this picturesque soldier it is difficult to realize that it is only a few years since we saw him pictured in the papers as a lad in short trousers. Next we remember the stories of his successful efforts to sow a large crop of wild oats, the undisguised concern of his royal father, and the approving applause of his countrymen at his democratic demonstrations and preferred patriotism. The emperor, a strict disciplinarian, upon one occasion felt constrained to place the young fellow under arrest, confining him to the palace at Potsdam; this, of course, after he had entered the army and had attained some rank."

"At the beginning of the great war the crown prince was given command of an army corps. The world smiled and assumed that it was because he was 'the son of his father.'"

"But from the start the young man displayed marked ability and in this fight before Verdun has demonstrated that he is a military genius. He is a fighter and a strategist. His immense army has suffered appalling losses, it is true, but he has undertaken a task the enormity of which is probably without comparison in military history. Pitted against the ablest of French generals, seasoned campaigners, he has acquitted himself in a manner that has excited the admiration of army expert soldiers the world over."

"The battle of Verdun may rank with Waterloo in its ultimate importance and the crown prince of Prussia may prove its Wellington. He comes from a line of fighters—Frederick the Great, the elder Wilhelm, his grandfather, the late Frederick—and 'blood will tell.'"

"This evolution from a harem scarum youth, beyond parental control only a few years ago, to a great commander, is not excelled in history. The devotion of his soldiers attests to his magnetism and to that spirit of democracy which at one time brought him into disfavor with his father, the emperor."

Speaker Champ Clark, in reply to certain critics of congress and its methods, said: "Of course, some of these critics without any responsibility could pass bills carrying $1,000,000,000 in a few hours, but members who are responsible cannot pass bills that way, and the taxpayers who foot the bills do not want them passed that way." The taxpayers who foot the bills do not want them passed at all, and they would be glad if the members who are "responsible," as well as those who are "without responsibility," could not pass them in a thousand years. The truth is they have passed appropriation measures, big and little, until the tax payers are about ready to pass in their checks.

To keep a city cleaner and neater and to substitute beauty for ugliness is to enhance the value of both public and private property. Billboards, signs, ugly, garish or unkempt buildings, buildings out of repair, untidy yards and vacant lots—all may counteract whatever the city may do to make public property attractive. Had it ever occurred to you that the only way to keep the city neat and to make it look as though it were really self-respecting is for all citizens to co-operate in insisting on private as well as public neatness and attention to good design?—Beaumont Journal.

That's just what the people of Bryan are doing and the results are becoming more and more evident every day. The spirit has taken possession of the whole community. The mayor and city council have it, and the result is seen in rapid advancement in public improvements of all kinds. The people have it and a "city beautiful" is fast coming into existence.

The peanut campaign has assumed such proportions that a calamity howler in North Texas is fearful that Texas will raise so many peanuts she will be unable to market the entire crop. On the other hand more conservative writers are predicting higher prices than ever for the fall crop, owing to the increased facilities for marketing.—Brenham Banner-Press.

Never mind the pessimist. Raise the peanuts and the market will be found. Some of the larger oil mill companies of the state have already stated they would purchase all the peanuts offered.—Austin American.

Providing a market for all the peanuts that can be grown is easy. Convert the peanuts into hog meat, and the market for pork and all pork products, is as limitless as the sands of the sea shore.

All brave men are not in the armies of the world. One from Illinois has married a woman "giving her age as over 18 and weight 615 pounds."—Austin American.

The press all over the country has had something to say of that brief description of herself—age over 18, weight 615 pounds. Of course she was over 18, no bride who ever lived could possibly have grown to such gigantic proportions in less than 18 brief, blessed and blissful summers. As George Bailey says, she had evidently reached the "middle age spread."

Villa is now said to be in hiding in a section of country covering six hundred square miles of territory and General Funston is calling for more troops for the search. You talk about hunting a needle in a hay stack, it would be an easy task compared to hunting Villa in a territory covering six hundred square miles.

During the year 1915 the New York Central Railroad handled 4,507,759 carloads of freight, or a carload every seven seconds. The combined length of the trains into which this number of cars was made up was 34,150 miles, or 9,000 miles more than the circumference of the earth.—Wall Street News.

In the scores of Zeppelin raids made on London and other sections of England, the results have not been such as to stamp the Zeppelin a success as an engine of war. The danger of destruction by shore batteries and aeroplanes renders their work ineffective and as these methods of destroying the Zeppelin are brought to a higher state of perfection, their usefulness in war will be reduced in proportion.

State Press says a chicken has no sense and knows no better than to wade right in to the most beautiful flower bed ever devised. State Press further says it is the owner of the marauding chickens that needs attention.

WIT AND HUMOR.

Ready and Willing.

Some of the visiting ministers have told some good stories about one another during the Laymen's Missionary Movement Convention at San Diego. This is one that was "handed" to Rev. Hugh L. Burleson:

A young couple came into his rooms just as he was going to begin service in the church and asked him to marry them. He said if they would wait until after the service he would give them a public wedding.

After the benediction he announced: "Now will those persons wishing to be married come forward?"

It is recorded in the story that eleven women and one man answered to the call.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Who Indeed?

A lawyer who was sometimes forgetful, having been engaged to plead the cause of an offender, began by saying: "I know the prisoner at the bar, and he bears the character of being a consummate and impudent scoundrel." Here somebody whispered to him that the prisoner was his client, when he immediately continued:

"But what great and good man ever lived who was not calumnyed by many of his contemporaries"—Case and Comment.

Hard Times.

Justice Suplee of Baltimore asked Mervin Moles why he had not supported his wife and little baby.

"Little baby!" replied Moles. "Why, your honor, I done got sixteen head of children. How kin I support them, your honor, when this here wife of mine keeps gettin' me 'rested fo' not supportin' them? She done keep me in jail so much for not supportin' them that when I gits out I's kinder discouraged, an' jes' 'bout the time I's gettin' encouraged she has me 'rested again. What kin I do?"—Ex.
